

Yggdrasil
Jared Linares, Zane Dayton, Benjamin Bell, Gabe Lytle

1. Ropes Course

BYU-I ILO – Sound Thinkers

Summary: Our team came together and started the ropes course on possibly the hottest day we could. We were taught through orientation and quickly moved on to the actual ropes course. The ropes course itself was free roam with multiple floors and paths that anyone could choose from. As we went about navigating the ropes course we were able to give advice to those crossing on the best way to get across. The people giving advice who had already crossed were much more helpful than those who hadn't. We enjoyed the challenge and the chance to communicate and bond with each other.

2. D&D

BYU-I ILO – Effective Communicators

Summary: We set out with the goal in mind to escape the prison, which we were able to do. Not only did we accomplish our goal in mind, but we went further than originally anticipated and had a lot of fun with each other along the way. Each player's character had a unique skill-set that made them a valuable member of the team. Because everybody had a different role to play, we were required to communicate amongst each other to figure out the best way to solve each puzzle or defeat each foe.

3. Communications Journal

BYU-I ILO – Disciples of Christ

Summary: Each team member recorded some of their social interactions (interviews, meetings, dates, or just ordinary conversations) over the three-week period, with the goal to improve the way we interact with and treat other people. At the end, we all came up with conclusions and reflections about what we learned.

- One of Gabe's main takeaways was that he needs to be a better listener.
- One of Ben's main takeaways was that he needs to speak up more, especially when complimenting people.
- One of Jared's main takeaways was that he needs to be more direct.

4. Grad Planning

BYU-I ILO – Skilled Collaborators

Summary: Due to the many interactions with each other, we were able to talk about our majors and the classes we had enjoyed or hadn't enjoyed. Even though some of our teammates haven't been in college for long, everyone had valuable and interesting information and tips for classes. Through talking to each other about the classes we have enjoyed and not enjoyed, each of us were able to get a better idea of what we wanted to take for the next or several next semesters. Teachers, classes, times, locations, and class types were all discussed at various points.